REV. MR. BAKER FAVORS SUFFRAGE

Makes Address before Gettysburg Club in Library of the Court House. Gives Various Reasons for Advocating New Measure.

Many arguments for equal suffrage were advanced at this afternoon's meeting of the Woman Suffrage Study Club in the Law Library of the Court House when Rev. J. B. Baker, pastor of St. James Lutheran church, made the principal address. He said in part:

"It's a long, long way from the stealing of the Sabine wives to the days of Woman's Suffrage, and womanhood has shed many hopeless tears and lifted many helpless hands along the way. But the dawn of a better day is at hand. The great, great granddaughter of the twentieth generation of the woman who pulled the cart to market, and was sometimes sold to pay the taxes, and often flogged for disobedience, and never allowed to speak in public, is today found in practically every industry on earth except the boiler shop, and she gets the equivalent of that noise from the little tykes who hang about her skirts.

"She is in the office, the store, the factory, the school, the mill. Russia has even an aviatrix in her military service and many English women are in training for home defence.

"Because of this intermingling of work and interest some women of our country insist that women should also have the privilege of the ballot. To this we believe they are entitled.

"First, because this is a representative government of the people, for the people and by the people and women are people, which not even the most racist anti will deny.

"Secondly we believe in woman's suffrage because women must obey the laws as well as the men and ought therefore to have a voice in the making of those laws. It is true the alien must do that too but he is denied the ballot for a time because the presumption is that he is prejudiced in favor of foreign institutions and foreign governments.

"Thirdly, we believe in woman's suffrage because women must pay taxes and taxation without representation is as great a tyranny to-day as it was when our forefathers threw the English tea into Boston harbor. Some of the biggest tax payers in Gettysburg are women, they have no more voice in the local borough government or the state laws than the chicken thieves in the county jail. Is this fair, is it just? If some of the men who frown on woman's suffrage were to be treated that way for just one year they would roar like a caged lion.

"Fourthly, we believe in Woman's Suffrage because the interests of the home will be best conserved by it. The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world is an old adage that is partly true and partly false. Lincoln said 'All that I am I owe to my mother,' but Jesse James was also the son of a Christian mother and the child of a paragonage.

"A mother's influence is of all roses the sweetest that a child carries with him through the years but, when the sirens of the sinful world begin to sing, the child of many prayers often throws the rose away and rushes headlong up to Circe's trough to be brutalized.

"What length would be added to the mother's arm if, after her son has left the old home, she could by ballot help to close the places that are tempting her son to ruin. The women of Illinois showed exactly what all women would do when given the chance. Their first ballot was cast about a year ago and in one day they closed 1100 saloons, showing that they know how to use the ballot as well as Dutch cleanser.

"In a cartoon magazine of this month there is a picture of a Londoner obeying the city order of 'Lights Out'. He was standing before a bureau powdering his barleycorn bulb which was as rosy as crimson rambler ever was or could be.

"That describes the average man's ballot on the liquor question. He tries to cover the bloody business with the powder of restriction and regulation, with him it is 'lights out'; with woman it is 'booze out', and since she furnishes the boys at the risk of her own life it is only fair that she should have at least her say if not her way."

TWO INTERESTING WILLS PROBATED

One Son Gets Principal Share of the Estate of the Late William Knouse. Seven People Benefit by Will of Lydia Little.

The will of the late William H. Knouse, of Menallen township has been admitted to probate in the office of Register and Recorder Gardner.

All the personal property and real estate are left to his son, Cecil F. Knouse, with the exception of his safe, which is bequeathed to his daughter, Mrs. Ellsworth Bream. To his wife he leaves the right and privilege to have her home and board free of all expense with her son, Cecil F. Knouse. He also leaves to her the use of one room for storage, and also the range, lounge, and cooking stove, during her lifetime, and on her death to go to the son named.

To each of the following children there is left $75.00 to be paid as follows, to William D. Knouse to be paid two years after his father's death; to Mrs. James May, to be paid after three years; to Mrs. Ellsworth Bream, after four years; to Miss Annie M. Knouse after five years.

The will was made April 3, 1905 and Cecil F. Knouse is named as the executor.

The will of Lydia A. Little, of Gettysburg, was admitted to probate in the office of the register and recorder this morning. She leaves $100 to the Evergreen Cemetery Association as a permanent endowment for the family lot; $100 to George A. McClellan; $50 to Miss Hattie Johns; $50 to Mr. Humrich, each for services rendered. The residue of the estate is left in four equal shares to her step-son, Duncan Little, to her niece, Emma Lauver and Elmira Deardorff, and to S. M. Bushman, who is also named as her executor.

The will was made April 1, 1905.

He leaves a widow, and three sons; Harry T. Fair and J. Ross Fair, of Taneytown, and Robert R. Fair, of Baltimore; also one sister, Mrs. Alice L. Harnish, of Taneytown.

The funeral was held in Taneytown this morning.

FISHERMEN SAY TROUT ARE FEW

Plan to Restock Marsh Creek and Other Streams in this County. Local Anglers Have but Little Success. The Reasons.

Fishermen who have whipped Adams County streams for trout during the past ten days say that there is a deplorable shortage of the game fish which for years gave the sportsmen so many happy hours. But few catches have been made and these are nearly all small, six and seven inch trout being the usual size caught. Various reasons are given. A well known local angler said this morning,

"In the first place our streams have not been restocked for the past five or six years. The fish now being caught are two or three years old, but they are the natural stock, and no outside replenishment has been made for a long time. Every fall after the trout season is closed there are men who gig and seine for suckers and eels. Without question many of these also take trout and, as a result, the streams have become sadly depleted."

Charles Carbaugh, of Cashtown, has been notified by the United States Fish Commission that they are sending him three cans of fingerling brook trout to be planted in Marsh Creek and the streams that flow into it. They have been expected for some days but have not yet arrived. They will be well distributed as soon as Mr. Carbaugh receives them.

On account of the small number of trout caught during the early days of the season fewer anglers have been along the banks of the streams than for many years, and they have returned home much dissatisfied with the results obtained. In Franklin County some of the streams are said to show a normal supply of the fish while in other places the same condition as that which exists here is reported.

WON FROM BUCKNELL

Gettysburg Takes Base Ball Game, Five to Three.

Hoar proved himself equal to the occasion at Lewisburg Friday and, while his teammates were pounding out ten hits and five runs, held Bucknell to eight hits and three runs. Gettysburg again played errorless ball.

Hall had four hits, one of them a three bagger; while Reiff had three hits, one good for the complete circuit. All of Bucknell's runs were earned in the second inning, while Gettysburg earned three of her five runs.

BASE BALL MONEY GLADLY GIVEN

Committee Meet Ready Response and Financing of Local Team in Blue Ridge League will not be Difficult Problem, they Say.

With the definite news at hand that Hagerstown's entering the Blue Ridge League is a sure thing, Gettysburg fans are going to their preparations for the coming season in dead earnest. A team which will do the town ample justice has been signed and the followers of the great national sport are confident that the five other towns in the circuit will have to do some tall hustling to get the better of the locals.

That this enthusiasm is taking a substantial form is shown in the reception being given the subscription committee. It is believed that little trouble will be experienced in raising a fund of $2000 on which to start. The committee has received one $35.00 subscription, nine $25.00 subscriptions with three more prospects in view; and sufficient $10.00 promises to make a list of fifty for this amount almost a sure thing. The committee has not yet started to take the smaller gifts but it is believed that the $5.00 subscriptions will be very numerous.

With the fair to be held later in the spring, the picture show benefits, and other means of raising money, it is thought that the securing of the starting fund will not be difficult in any way. Hanover's list is now well on to $1100 but they have been working for several weeks while Gettysburg's activity is comparatively recent.

The showing which the college team is making is most gratifying to town fans in view of the fact that the majority of the college boys will be held here for the summer season. They have been playing errorless ball in a number of their games and the only department of the sport in which they seemed to be weak has been so well developed, under Coach Plank's direction, that at Susquehanna they tallied eighteen hits and at Bucknell ten, showing that they can not only field but are fully able to take care of themselves in the hit and run columns.

It will take unabated enthusiasm and generosity to start the team properly but the committee state that a continuation of the present feeling will be all that they will ask to insure a successful season.

HAS BROKEN LEG

Painful Injury when Gettysburg Man Falls at his Home.

P. M. Misher is at his home on Chambersburg street suffering from a fractured leg. Mr. Misher was walking in the house about two weeks ago when he fell. One of his ankles became very much swollen and it was believed that it had been sprained. On Friday the swelling had abated sufficiently to allow the physician in charge to make a more thorough examination and it was found that a bone was broken. Mr. Misher is resting as comfortably as can be expected.

IMPLEMENTS SAVED

Auto Truck and Farming Machinery Saved by Prompt Action.

The implement shed on the farm of C. Arthur Griest, near Guernsey, was destroyed by a fire of unknown origin in Friday afternoon. It was first discovered by Mrs. Griest who drove out of danger Mr. Griest's large automobile truck, before he reached the place. The other machinery was all gotten to a place of safety by quick work. The building was insured.

COSTLY BLAZE

Flames Sweep a Town in Cumberland County.

Early Friday morning, about the time that the forest fires in the South Mountains, which had for the last three days been destroying thousands of acres of valuable timber land, were extinguished by the rain, a big fire broke out in Jacksonville, four miles from Newville, Cumberland county. The loss amounts to $11,000. Jacksonville, known also by the name of Greythorne, has no fire protection and the flames were fought entirely by bucket brigades. Water was drawn from the wells in the vicinity, which practically all went dry by the time the fire was extinguished.

The fire had its origin in the big building which accommodated the store of Jacob Meebeth, the town hall and the hall of the Junior Order United American Mechanics. It entirely destroyed the building and its contents. Meebeth's store was valued at $3,000 and was uninsured. The contents of the lodge hall included all the instruments and other equipment of the Jacksonville band, and the loss, apart from the store room, was $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

The house and stable of Jacob Snoke next caught fire and burned to the ground, involving a loss of $2,000, partly covered by insurance. The sporting goods store of M. N. Fail, which was also completely destroyed, was valued at $1,000 and was uninsured. The home of John Campbell was slightly damaged.

GERMAN FLEET SEEKING BRITISH

Kaiser's Warships Even Invade English Waters.

BIG BATTLE EXPECTED SOON

All Commercial Shipping Has Been Cleared From Sea For Trial of Naval Strength.

Berlin, April 24.—The German admiralty gave out a statement reading as follows:

"The German high sea fleet has recently cruised repeatedly in the North sea, advancing into English waters without meeting the sea forces of Great Britain."

Expect Great Battle In North Sea. London, April 24.—A great battle in the North sea may be a question of hours.

All commercial shipping has been cleared from the old German ocean and preparations are complete for a trial of strength between the British fleet and the German grand fleet, supported by the Helgoland fortress.

Since Thursday night London has been in a fever of excitement in anticipation of a battle. Rumor after rumor spread through the streets, restaurants and clubs of activities of the empire's forces afloat.

For a week British warships have been operating in the eastern reaches of the North sea, even under the guns of Helgoland itself. A statement by the German admiralty said that British submarines had been observed in Helgoland bay, which lies between the island fortress and the mainland. This statement was passed by the censor in London without comment or denial.

A most significant and at the same time most unusual message came from Amsterdam, quoting an official announcement on behalf of the British government stopping all traffic between the British Isles and Holland. This announcement was not issued in London, but it likewise was passed without comment by the censor.

That the French have joined their British allies is indicated in a dispatch from Copenhagen, which says an Anglo-French squadron has been sighted in the waters north of Stavenger, on the Norway coast.

STILL HOPES FOR PEACE

President Wilson Has Not Given Up Belief He Can Aid Belligerents.

Washington, April 24.—Comment on President Wilson's neutrality speech before the Associated Press in New York on Tuesday, published in Europe and cabled here, is being noted with interest by the president's advisers and friends, who say he expected to hear conflicting opinions.

President Wilson's idea in the speech, they said, was to show that the United States stands ready to help either side, or both, to recover after the war as well as during peace negotiations, and that the president believes the United States will have frequent opportunity to show it is the real friend of all the belligerents.

Any interpretation that the president has given up hope that the United States will make peace is declared by his friends to be without foundation.

NEW RUSSIAN DRIVE

Austrians Claim to have Repulsed Muscovites Near Usok Pass.

Vienna, April 24.—The following official communication was issued by the war office here:

"On the Carpathian front fresh attacks against our positions on both sides of the Usok pass were repulsed. In these violent attacks the enemy suffered heavy losses before our positions at the top of the pass, which were attacked several times. More than 400 dead were left, while 1200 Russians were captured."

(The above is the first indication that the Russians have reached the Usok pass. The approaches to this watershed, according to all accounts, have been defended vigorously by the Austrians and Germans, and all previous reports had indicated that the czar's armies have been held back at least ten miles from the top.)

Russian Squadron Rakes Turk Coast.

Petrograd, April 24.—The Russian Black sea torpedo boat squadron has bombarded the Turkish coast between Archava and Artachin on April 19. This fifteen-mile strip of coast, in which was located the quarters of the Turkish army operating in this region, was swept with shells and the barracks and provision stores were ignited and destroyed. A large number of Turkish coastwise vessels laden with ammunition and supplies, was sunk.

German Losses In Africa.

Cape Town, South Africa, April 24.—German troops in German South-west Africa have suffered another defeat, it was officially announced. The right wing of the Union forces, pursuing 600 troops retreating northward from Keetmanshoop, overtook the Germans at Gabys. In the battle that followed 400 Germans were killed and wounded. Colonel Vanderventer reports that the Union losses were only one killed and two wounded.

WILLIAM THAW.
American Aviator In French Army
Reported to Have Been Killed.

Fears for William Thaw, 24, who is serving as an aviator with the foreign volunteers fighting for France, were set at rest when his father, Benjamin Thaw, of Pittsburgh, Pa., received a telegram from Lawrence Slade, a relative in Paris, which reads: "William safe." Thaw had been reported in dispatches from Paris as having been killed while scouting near Verdun.

GERMANS MAKE GAINS IN FLANDERS DRIVE

Capture Four Villages and Take Many Prisoners.

London, April 24.—Marked gains by the Germans in Flanders are announced in the report from the German general staff.

The report says that the villages of Langemark, Steenstrate, Het Sas and Pliken were captured Thursday by the Kaiser's troops.

In the recent operations German troops have taken 1600 prisoners and thirty cannon from the French and English, the report adds.

In addition to capturing the four villages the Germans have crossed the Ypres canal again, according to the official statement.

Announcement of the capture of the four Flanders towns was the first Berlin official corroboration of reports that the German troops had opened a new offensive toward Ypres and the Yser canal. Pliken is less than four miles north of Ypres. The Germans now hold the region east of Ypres, and success in the present movement will force the evacuation of that town by the allies. Steenstrate and Het Sas are villages on the east bank of the Yser canal. The former commands an important highway.

The British forces have shown no disposition under the repeated rushes of the Germans to relax their grip on Hill No. 60, near Ypres, and the fighting in this locality shows signs of developing along the wide front with increasing intensity, even rivaling the attempts of the Germans to break through the British lines last fall.

RUSS AIR RAID ON PLOCK

German Positions Badly Damaged by Muscovite Aviators.

London, April 24.—A Reuter dispatch from Petrograd says:

"There was much activity Thursday on the part of Russian airships. One dropped fifteen bombs on Plock. Several German boats on the Vistula were struck as were the railroad station and trains."

"Two other machines bombarded the railway station at Mlaw and the German aerodrome at Sanniky. Considerable damage was done to German trenches."

EXPORTS TO BE $2,750,000,000

Redfield Estimates Total For Fiscal Year at That Figure.

Washington, April 24.—Secretary Redfield laid before President Wilson at the cabinet meeting his estimates that American exports for the current fiscal year will reach $2,750,000,000.

The secretary took to the cabinet meeting tables showing that exports of breadstuffs from the United States last month amounted to $59,000,000, as compared with $5,000,000 in March, 1914. Breadstuffs exported from the United States since the outbreak of the war have totalled $418,000,000.

Spaniard Slain In Mexico.

Washington, April 24.—Casimiro Fernandez, a Spanish subject, was shot and killed by Captain Loza, a Carranza officer, in Puebla, Mexico, according to mail dispatches received at the Spanish embassy. It was stated that Fernandez was dragged from his home and shot without trial. He was charged with being implicated in a conspiracy against the government. Captain Loza has been condemned by the Puebla government to twelve years' imprisonment.

COLONEL AGAIN BAFFLES LAWYER

Calls Barnes Sort of Jekyll and Hyde.

TRIED TO REFORM HIM

Roosevelt Tells How He Refused to Have Penrose as Chairman of National Republican Committee.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 24.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt again underwent cross-examination during the whole of the Barnes libel suit hearing in the supreme court.

William M. Ivins, chief of the legal staff for William Barnes, apparently failed to do much damage in this process.

The ex-president was quizzed at length on contributions to his campaign fund when he ran for president in 1904, and he expressed surprise when questions by Mr. Ivins set forth that Standard Oil magnates had been heavy subscribers to the Republican fund.

The colonel said he had given instructions that Standard Oil money was not to be accepted.

When Mr. Ivins, always jibing and pecking and slapping at this volcano of a man, went into intimate details of the Roosevelt $3,000,000 campaign fund of 1904, the colonel told the jury that the millions there were dropped into the hat Cortelyou passed were pure millions and most untainted cash.

Warning to the subject, the colonel added that George W. Perkins contributed $25,000 to the 1904 fund in exactly the same spirit that he would have contributed to the Y. M. C. A. From Mr. Perkins $25,000 meant no more, said the colonel, than $25 would from the station agent at Oyster Bay, and he would regard each man in the same light. And then a thought occurred to him of Thomas F. Ryan's $500,000 contribution to the Parker campaign fund of the same year. And the colonel fairly assaulted Mr. Ivins with words as he shouted that Mr. Ryan's contribution was probably as disinterested as Mr. Perkins' and donated in the same spirit as a church gift.

The examination went at length into the circumstances of the colonel's nomination for the vice presidency at the Philadelphia convention of 1900, and for the presidency four years later Mr. Ivins sought to show that many Republican bosses had aided the colonel.

In this connection Colonel Roosevelt announced that he had drawn the line at Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, as chairman of the Republican national committee, and had urged that George B. Cortelyou be named. "You did not hesitate," asked Mr. Ivins, "to dictate who should be chair man, did you?"

"I wouldn't have Mr. Penrose," replied Colonel Roosevelt.

The colonel's testimony included a statement that he had regarded Mr. Barnes as a "sort of Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, who, like other politicians, had his good sides and his bad sides." The colonel said he did not, as suggested by Mr. Ivins, try to sever the ligaments between "these Siamese twins of politics." Quite on the contrary, he declared, he endeavored to have the "Doctor Jekyll" in them absorb the "Mr. Hyde."

The colonel admitted that he had complied with many of the suggestions made to him by Mr. Barnes in regard to the filling of offices in the state government during the two years he was governor.

RAIN CHECKS FOREST FIRES

7000 Acres of State Reserve Burned Over In Cumberland County.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 24.—Forest fires which have been raging in the Cumberland and Susquehanna valleys have been put out by the heavy rain which fell early Friday, according to reports reaching the department of forestry office.

Western Pennsylvania fires were reported under control. It is estimated that 7000 acres of state forest reserve land have been burned over in Cumberland county alone.

Injured Fire Fighter Sues State.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 24.—The first suit to be entered against the state under an act of 1915 was brought by Peter C. Kuhn, of Scranton, who claims $25,000 damages for injuries caused by being summoned to fight forest fires while camping in Wayne county.

Waynesburg Block Burned.

Waynesburg, Pa., April 24.—One square block of business buildings and residences were destroyed by fire. The loss was estimated at $112,000. GOVERNOR FORESEES LOCAL OPTION PLANK

Leaders Told Him It Might be in Next Platform.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 24.—Governor Brumbaugh said that he had been told by Republican leaders that they did not think there would be much trouble about getting a local option plank in the next Republican state platform.

"I have been told by prominent Republican leaders who were not supporting the local option bill in the present session of the legislature that in their opinion there would be no great difficulty in getting a plank for local option in the next Republican state platform," said the governor, when asked about reports that such information had been conveyed to him.

"These statements were made to me voluntarily by men who were not in accord with me on local option," continued the governor.

"What about the rumors of an extra session?" he was asked.

"There is nothing to that yet," replied the governor. He said: "I have nothing to say," when the question was put to him whether he was considering an extra session for local option. He refused to make any further comment on the reports of an extra session or why one might be necessary.

FORESEES DREAD BRITISH WOMEN

English Author Warns Nation
Something Must Be Done
at Once to Provide For Spinsters.

THAT after the war is over the women in Europe will live in a state of rapt beatitude contemplating the heroes who fought is by no means the opinion of W. L. George, author of "Women of Tomorrow." "The Making of an Englishman" and other books. He fears that, at any rate so far as Great Britain is concerned, women will have to face lives of unhappiness terrible to think of.

In August, 1914, there were in the British Islands, he says, about 1,150,000 more women than men. Therefore, even if all men married, there must be 1,150,000 women who could not possibly find husbands. And all men do not marry. So the problem was grave enough even then.

Now, it is obvious, he continues, that the war is going to make more serious this serious situation, owing to the loss in killed and invalided. It is, therefore, interesting to ascertain what this loss of men of marriageable age is likely to be.

It will serve our purpose to estimate the loss at 200,000 men, for a loss of 200,000 is quite enough to indicate the seriousness of the future problem. For let us not forget that these losses may be not only 200,000 men, but 200,000 men between the ages of nineteen and thirty-eight, and unfortunately (I say this in no spirit of levity) we lose no women. It would be far better for many of them to lose their lives than to find themselves where they will be when deprived of the love and companionship which ought to have been theirs.

Will Be Marriage Crisis.

And, incidentally, there is the "widow danger." I do not know why, but widows are attractive to men, so that the millions of spinsters will find a new and cruel competition among soldiers' widows, many of whom are young and attractive.

The result will be a marriage crisis, no more and no less. The marriage rate must go down; but, while it does so, the rest of life will not decrease. A peace, glorious or inglorious, will not satisfy the legitimate needs of women. Unemployment, which is certain to supervene when the war is done, the soldiers' return to a disturbed labor market, and the war industries' close down will make marriage still more difficult. The result will be one of an unpleasant kind.

Moralists will blame the women who fail, and clerics will thunder, but that will not stop what will happen, for, to speak colloquially, there will not be enough men to go round as husbands.

But most women will find their morality too strong. They will bravely face solitude, but they will not face it cheerfully.

More Militants Will Arise.

If there are fewer men to marry and to support women, women will have to come more than ever into the labor market. There, as usual, they will find themselves sweating, and so I confidently expect that they will ask more fiercely than ever for better wages, shorter hours and a share in political power.

This state of affairs will have an end, of course. Within thirty or forty

SWISS WARN FOREIGNERS.

President Says They Must Be Neutral or Leave Country.

The Swiss government is having trouble in maintaining the standard of neutrality which it has set for itself and its citizens in the matter of checking propaganda for any of the belligerents.

President Motta, in the name of the federal council, has just issued new orders to the police. He says:

"We recommend that you devote particular attention to the conduct of foreigners sojourning in Switzerland. We must insist that foreigners remember that the country whose hospitality they enjoy is a neutral country. Against those who fail in the observance of their duties in this respect it will be necessary to proceed with pitiless severity."

The police of Zurich acted promptly on receipt of the president's order forbidding the sale in the streets of newspapers published in the belligerent countries.

$15,000 FOR BROKEN NOSE.

Mrs. Bump, Injured at Sea, Wins Suit Against French Line.

Mrs. Theresa Bump, a widow of Baltimore, has recovered in the federal district court a verdict of $15,000 against the French line for personal injuries. She was a passenger on the liner Rochambeau, and while the ship was rolling in midocean went to look for her pet poodle. She was thrown against a cabin door. Her nose was broken in two places and five of her teeth were knocked out.

In her suit Mrs. Bump asserted that she was disfigured for life and had been treated unskillfully by the ship's surgeon.

Supply of Oil Assured.

An oil bed in northern Alberta, Canada, is estimated by a British geologist to contain enough oil to satisfy the world's demand at the existing rate for some two thousand years.

TIME AWAITING AFTER PEACE DAY

Urges Big Schemes to Aid
Young Men to Marry or to Send Unmarried Girls

years most of these superfluous women will be dead. But in thirty or forty years a great many things may happen to an industrial system that is battered by hundreds of thousands of unhappy women.

The question, then, is, What can be done to help the women and to help the state? A friend suggested to me in a spirit of regrettable burlesque that in the terms of peace Britain should stipulate for the importation of 250,000 young Germans, aged less than twenty-five. I fear that the British women would not welcome that very heartily, but the suggestion opens up another which is more attractive.

Suggests Colonies of Belgians.

Belgium is ruined. It will have to be rebuilt, but there will be no capital to do it quickly. Now, there is in Great Britain a great amount of waste land. The Belgians are very skillful market gardeners and agriculturists. It would be, therefore, quite feasible to arrange for a scheme of land settlement for, say, 200,000 Belgians, aged less than twenty-five. They could be given small holdings, with cottages and co-operative institutions. Doubtless a great many would find favor in the eyes of British women and I mention it in passing, provide the nation with a very sturdy agricultural class.

Another solution is encouragement of female emigration. I think it wrong that women should be driven out of their own country, but there is nothing against offering them inducements to emigrate to a country where they are likely to lead happier lives. At present there is still a great demand in Canada and Australia for domestic servants. There is also a demand for nurses, while women used to dairy work are wanted in every colony. It might be possible to include even the United States, where the males outnumber the females.

But emigration must not be haphazard. There must be a national scheme offering women homes in every colony where they will be maintained until they find suitable employment.

Make Marriage Possible.

This leaves standing the large problem of the women who will not emigrate and leave friends and familiar scenes. It is not enough to say that in thirty or forty years it will be all right. Something must be done for them now, and the only thing is to increase the supply of men and to make marriage easier.

The time has come for every industrial town in Great Britain to rid itself of its slums; to buy them not at fancy figures, but at housebreakers' prices, and to rebuild them as harmonious and healthy workmen's dwellings. The time has come to give motherhood an endowment greater than the $720 granted by the insurance act.

If Britain will have the courage to start big schemes they will surely increase the supply of men and also that of marriageable men. They will be expensive, will cost a few fewer motor-cars and Riviera trips, but in days when patriotism is supposed to be sturdy this should not deprive them of the right to be considered. For there will be need.

MAY SUNDER JOINED TWINS.

Little Honojosa Sisters Go to Clinic of Famous Surgeons.

Guadalupe and Josephine Honojosa, who were born in Havana, Cuba, two and a half years ago joined together like the famous Siamese Twins, have been sent to Rochester, Minn., where the noted surgeons, the Drs. Mayo, will see if the little girls can be cut asunder.

The binding connection, which joins the children in front at almost the center of the stomach, is thirteen inches in circumference. They can walk forward with ease, each putting an arm about the other's waist, and can even change sides at will.

One can lie on the edge of a bed and the other stand, their bodies making an X. Medicine given to one has no effect upon the other. One child may be laughing and the other crying at the same time.

The babies are very fond of each other and kiss and hug at times in a loving, sisterly way. But, like other children, they sometimes "fall out" and then there is a merry little "scrap."

BOY PRODIGY IS STRICKEN.

Eight-year-old Takes Library With Him In Search For Health.

Oecil Fry, an eight-year-old prodigy who could read and write at the age of two and use a typewriter at three and who has mastered Bacon's essays and the lives of all presidents as well as many classics, has been stricken with heart disease at his home in Denver and is to be sent to Albuquerque, N. M., in the hope of saving his life.

Besides his library of some 500 books, the only toys he will take with him are a baseball and bat.

Teakettle in Distress.

One day small Sadie was watching the lid of the teakettle rise and fall, emitting at the same time tiny puffs of steam. Finally she said: "Mamma, you'd better call in the doctor. The teakettle's got the asthma."

POPULAR MECHANICS

Nevada's Underground Water.

Certain valleys of southeastern Nevada contain a large supply of ground water, and a part of this water can be economically developed for irrigation, according to a report by Everett Carpenter just issued by the United States geological survey. The localities at which ground water can be found are indicated, and the best methods of recovering the underground water at each locality are described. The report contains also an interesting account of the geology of the region and shows that at one time this desert country contained a large river and seven large lakes, all of which are now absolutely dry. The ancient stream and lakes are described and shown on maps for the first time in this report. One of the most valuable features of the report is a guide to water places on routes of travel, supplemented by a map showing roads and watering places and a table giving the distances between watering places.

Locking Hook For Garments.

A new holder for coat, hat and umbrella is equipped with a locking mechanism by which these articles, thought out in the open, may be secured under lock and key, says Popular Mechanics. It is therefore particularly adapted to shops and offices as well as to barber shops, restaurants and similar places.

COAT HOOK THAT LOCKS GARMENTS.

In using the mechanism is first unlocked and opened, the arrangement being such that the key cannot be removed until the mechanism is again closed. The coat is placed on the hook projecting from the bottom, the umbrella in the hole in the horizontal bar that best suits its size and the hat on the smaller bar projecting from the front. When the holder is closed these articles are held securely and cannot be removed except by unlocking the mechanism with the key.

Zinc Oxide In Paint.

Zinc oxide is one of the most valuable white pigments and is produced by roasting and subliming certain ores of zinc. It is very opaque, has excellent spreading qualities and is generally mixed with basic carbonate of lead—white lead—for use in white paints. By thus combining these certain undesirable qualities of both are overcome. For instance, zinc oxide dries to a hard surface which does not stain changes of temperature as well as the softer lead pigment. On the other hand, it tends to eliminate the tendency toward chalking which the lead possesses. It is widely used as a base for delicate colors and in enamels. Engineering Magazine.

The public meeting of South Mountain Grange in the hall at Arendtsville Wednesday evening was largely attended.

Of twenty four entries for the oratorical contest eighteen were present and participated. There were four classes. In the second and fourth classes the competition was particularly keen and in the fourth class the judges awarded two seconds.

Mrs. Clara V. Hartman as lecturer had charge of the program and Professors Lehman, Stover and Lady, of the borough schools were judges.

Letitia Griest and Daniel Wolf of the first class; Kathryn Hershey and Ryland Garretson of the second class; Dolly Hoffman and Stella Deardorff of the third class and Martha Boyer, Paul Hoffman and Eva Oyler of the fourth class were awarded the first and second honors respectively and the cash prizes.

Vocal and instrumental music made a complete and pleasing program.

Term Originated by Fox.

The word "Radical," as applied to a British political party, originated in a speech made by Charles J. Fox, in 1797, when he referred to the necessity for "radical reform."

Proper Strivings.

Patience and strength are what we need; an earnest use of what we have now; and all the time an earnest discontent until we come to what we ought to be.—Phillips Brooks.

THE AUTO-OILED WINDMILL WITH DUPLICATE GEARS RUNNING IN OIL

• Every bearing is constantly flooded with oil. Two quarts of oil in the gear case of this 8-foot auto-oiled windmill will keep the gears and every bearing flooded with oil for a year or more.

The galvanized steel helmet covers the gears, keeps out rain, keeps out dust, keeps in oil. The mill needs oiling but once a year.

There is a windmill, known the world over as "the windmill which runs on all others stand still." This new windmill with gears and bearings flooded with oil runs in much less wind than that well known windmill.

The two large gears, which lift the load straight up, are each independent of the other and each is driven by its own pinion on the main shaft and must take its full load at all times. The auto-oiled windmill, with its duplicate gears and two pinions lifting the load straight up, is unbreakable. Every 8-foot mill is tested under a pumping load of 3000 pounds on the pump rod. For the larger sizes the test is proportionately greater. We know that every one of these windmills is unbreakable. We venture the assertion that this is the most nearly perfect, best made, best tested, best oiled, most nearly perpetual, automatic and self-sufficient of any machine of any kind ever made for farm work and the most nearly fool-proof. There is no friction on any part of the turning device when the mill is running and very little when the wheel is furled.

A small child can easily furl this windmill or an automatic regulator can take care of it. One of these mills has been furled 10,000 times in one day by a man on our premises—more times than it would ordinarily be furled in 30 years of service.

A hand brake, of the automobile type, is used, and it always holds.

The gear case contains two pairs of gears and the supply of oil. From this gear case the oil circulates to every bearing in a constant stream. It flows out through the friction washers in the hub of the wheel and is automatically returned to the gear case. Not a drop of oil can escape. It is used over and over. So long as there is any oil in the gear case the gears and every bearing will be flooded with oil.

If you are tired of climbing a windmill tower; if you are tired of buying repairs and having them put on; or, if you are tired of waiting for a big wind, let us furnish you an unbreakable, self-oiling, ever-going mill to go on any old tower. It costs but little and you will get the difference between no water in a light wind and an abundance of water in almost no wind. The flooding of all the working parts with oil, the perfect balance of the wheel and vane on the tower, the very small, turntable on which the mill pivots and the outside furling device make this difference.

Now there is no objection to a high tower. Have as high a tower as you need to get wind. You don't have to climb it. Your dealer can come once a year and put in oil, if needed, and inspect the mill.

Running water purifies itself—stagnant water, standing water, collects and retains impurities. If you pump from your well constantly all the water it can spare, the water that comes to take its place will be pure. If the water in your well stands until you want some, and you pump but little, then it is likely that surface water will flow into it and carry in impurities. The unsaleable well is the one that has standing water. A flowing stream is the thing to be desired.

● The auto-oiled windmill makes all this possible as it can run from one year's end to the other with practically no wear and no cost. If interested, write Aermotor Co., 1146 So. Campbell Ave., Chicago. Why not have flowing water, cool in summer and warm in winter, always fresh and pure? It will cost next to nothing. It will help to your family and stock. Let the water run into a good size reservoir and raise all the fish of the choice kinds your family can eat, and have water to irrigate your garden and make it raise many times as much as it would otherwise. Water costs nothing. Use it. To let it stand is to abuse it.

SYNOPSIS.

Christopher Bellew, a tenderfoot, starts for the Klondike in a gold rush and pluckily works at the back breaking toll of packing freight.

He meets a beautiful girl, Joy Gastell, deserts his own party, and he and Shorty, a new acquaintance, hire out to two wealthy prospectors. Joy has nicknamed him "Smoke."

Smoke and Shorty befriend a man named Breck and nearly perish in attempting to cross Lake Lebarge because of the uselessness of their employers.

Smoke and Shorty take command by force and get through to Dawson City, where they are discharged. On Breck's tip they stampede for Squaw Creek.

They overtake Joy Gastell and her father. To help the Sea Lion crowd Joy treacherously leads them away from Squaw Creek.

Smoke saves the girl's feet from freezing. He and Shorty by mistake jump a miner's claim and lose it. Then Smoke finds Surprise lake, the bottom of which is covered with gold.

Smoke is shot at, witnesses the murder of a miner by the unknown marksmen and is arrested for murder himself.

Breck shows a Surprise lake nugget, the impromptu court is stampeded, and Smoke's life is saved. Smoke wins money at roulette.

He continues to win. The gamblers buy him off. His system was based on the discovery that the roulette wheel was warped.

Prompted by Joy Gastell, Smoke enters a race for a million dollar claim against some of the best dog mushers.

At a critical moment Joy supplies Smoke with a fresh dog team, and he runs a dead heat with Big Olaf for the claim.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Adventure With the Little Man.

"I WISH you wasn't so set in your ways," Shorty demurred. "I'm sure short of that glacier. No man ought to tackle it by his lonesome."

Smoke laughed cheerfully and ran his eye up the glistening face of the tiny glacier that filled the head of the valley. "Here it is August already, and the days have been getting shorter for two months," he epitomized the situation. "You know quartz, and I don't. But I can bring up the grub, while you keep after that mother lode. So long. I'll be back by tomorrow evening."

He turned and started.

"I got a hunch something's going to happen," Shorty pleaded after him.

But Smoke's reply was a bantering laugh. He held on down the little valley, occasionally wiping the sweat from his forehead, while his feet crushed through ripe mountain raspberries and delicate ferns that grew beside patches of snow sheltered ice.

In the early spring he and Shorty had come to the Stewart river and launched out into the amazing chaos of the region where Surprise lake lay. And all of the spring and half of the summer had been consumed in futile wanderings, when, on the verge of turning back, they caught their first glimpse of the beaming, gold-bottomed sheet of water which had lured and fooled a generation of miners.

Making their camp in the old cabin which Smoke had discovered on his previous visit, they learned three things—first, heavy nugget gold was carpeted thickly on the lake bottom; next, the gold could be mined from the shallower portions, but the temperature of the water was man killing, and, finally, the draining of the lake was too stupendous a task for two men in the shorter half of a short summer. Undeterred, reasoning from the coarseness of the gold that it had not traveled far, they had set out in search of the mother lode. They had crossed the big glacier that frowned on the southern rim and devoted themselves to the puzzling maze of small valleys and canyons beyond, which, by most unmountain-like methods, drained, or had at one time drained, into the lake.

The valley Smoke was descending gradually widened after the fashion of any normal valley, but at the lower end it pinched narrowly between high, precipitous walls and abruptly stopped in a cross wall. At the base of this, in a welter of broken rock, the streamlet disappeared, evidently finding its way out underground.

Climbing the cross wall, from the top Smoke saw the lake beneath him. Unlike any mountain lake he had ever seen, it was not blue. Instead its intense peacock green tokened its shallowness. It was this shallowness that made its draining feasible. All about arose jumbled mountains, with ice scarred peaks and crags, grotesquely shaped and grouped. All was topsy turvy and unsystematic—a Dore nightmare.

Across the lake, seemingly not more than half a mile, but, as he well knew, five miles away, he could see the bunch of spruce trees and the cabin. He looked again to make sure and saw smoke clearly rising from the chimney. Somebody else had surprised themselves into finding Surprise lake, was his conclusion as he turned to climb the southern wall.

From the top of this he came down into a little valley, flower-floored and lazy with the hum of bees, that he had quite a comfortable valley yards' will fetch us to the rocks, and it's easy going, except for a couple of nasty fissures and one bad one that heads us down toward the bulge. There's a weak ice bridge there, but Shorty and I managed it."

"I'm lighter than you by forty pounds," Carson said. "Let me go first."

They stood on the edge of the crevasse. It was enormous and ancient, fully 100 feet across, with sloping, age-eaten sides instead of sharp, angled rims. At this one place it was bridged by a huge mass of ice, a hardened snow that was itself half ice. Even the bottom of this mass they could not see, much less the bottom of the crevasse. Crumbling and melting, the bridge threatened imminent collapse.

"Looks pretty bad," Carson admitted with an ominous head shake.

"But we've got to tackle it," Smoke said. "We can't camp here on the ice all night. And there's no other way. Shorty and I explored for a mile up. It was in better shape, though, when we crossed."

"It's one at a time, and me first," Carson took the part of one from Smoke's hand. "You'll have to cast off. I'll take the rope and the pick. Gimme your hand so I can slip down easy."

Slowly and carefully he lowered himself the several feet to the bridge, where he stood, making final adjustments for the perilous traverse. On his back was his pack outfit. Around his neck, resting on his shoulders, he coiled the rope, one end of which was still fast to his waist.

"I'd give a mighty good part of my millions right now for a bridge construction gang," he said, but his cheery, whimsical smile belied the words.

The pick and the long stick he used as an alpenstock he balanced horizontally after the manner of a rope-walker. He thrust one foot forward tentatively, drew it back and steered himself with a visible physical effort.

"Hello!" was the stranger's greeting, and Smoke's heart went out to the man in ready liking. "Just in time for a snack. There's coffee in the pot, a couple of cold flapjacks and some jerky."

"I'll go you if I lose," was Smoke's acceptance as he sat down. "I've been rather skimped on the last several meals, but there's oodles of grub over in the cabin."

"Across the lake? That's what I was heading for."

"Seems Surprise lake is becoming populous," Smoke complained, emptying the coffee pot.

"Go on, you're joking, aren't you?" the man said, surprise painted on his face.

Smoke laughed. "That's the way it takes everybody. You see those high ledges across there to the northwest? There's where I first saw it. No warning. Just suddenly caught the view of the whole lake from there. I'd given up looking for it too."

"Same here," the other agreed. "I'd headed back and was expecting to fetch the Stewart last night when out I popped in sight of the lake. If that's it where's the Stewart? And where have I been all the time? And how did you come here? And what's your name?"

"Bellew—Kit Bellew."

"Oh, I know you." The man's eyes and face were bright with a joyous smile, and his hand flashed eagerly out to Smoke's. "I've heard all about you."

He was a slender man, wiry with health, with quick black eyes and a magnetism of camaraderie.

"And this is Surprise lake?" he murmured incredulously. "And its bottom's buttered with gold?"

"Sure. There's some of the churning." Smoke dipped in his overalls pocket and brought forth half a dozen nuggets.

"Well, gosh-dash my dingbats, if you haven't beaten me to it," Carson swore whimsically, but his disappointment was patent. "And I thought I'd scooped the whole caboodle. Anyway, I've had the fun of getting here."

"Fun," Smoke cried. "Why, if we can ever get our hands on all that bottom we'll make Rockefeller look like 30 cents."

"But it's yours," was Carson's objection.

"Nothing to it, my friend. You've got to realize that no gold deposit like it has been discovered in all the history of mining. It will take you and me and my partner and all the friends we've got to lay our hands on it. All Bonanza and Eldorado dumped together wouldn't be richer than half an acre down there. The problem is to drain the lake. It will take millions. And there's only one thing I'm afraid of. There's so much of it that if we fail to control the output it will bring about the demonization of gold."

"And you tell me—" Carson broke off, speechless and amazed.

"Am glad to have you. It will take a year or two, with all the money we can raise, to drain the lake. It can be done. I've looked over the ground. But it will take every man in the country that's willing to work for wages. We'll need an army, and we need right now decent men in on the ground floor. Are you in?"

"Am I in? Don't I look it? I feel so much like a millionaire that I'm real timid about crossing that big glacier. Couldn't afford to break my neck now. Wish I had some more of those hob spikes. I was just hammering the last in when you came along. How's yours? Let's see."

Smoke held up his foot.

"Worn smooth as a skating rink!" Carson cried. "You've certainly been hiking some. Wait a minute, and I'll pull some of mine out for you."

But Smoke refused to listen. "Besides," he said, "I've got about forty feet of rope cached where we take the ice. My partner and I used it coming over. It will be a cinch."

It was a hard, hot climb. The sun blazed dazzlingly on the ice surface, and with streaming pores they painted from the exertion. There were places, crisscrossed by countless fissures and crevasses, where an hour of dangerous toil advanced them no more than a hundred yards. At 2 in the afternoon beside a pool of water bedded in the ice Smoke called a halt.

"Let's tackle some of that jerky," he said. "I've been on short allowance, and my knees are shaking. Besides, we're across the worst. Three hundred

Human Desires.

Henri-Frederic Amiel said that humanity is the dupe of its desires. Experience "has two ways of crushing us—by refusing our wishes and by fulfilling them. But he who only wishes what God wills escapes both catastrophes."

SOLDIERS BECOME FATALISTS IN WAR

Sure They Are Either "In Luck" or "Under an Fated Star."

GROW NEEDLESS OF DANGER

General, Grief Stricken on Loss of Wife, Daily Flings Himself Recklessly Into Path of Death, but Never Can Succeed in Getting Himself Even Scratched.

"Many of us soldiers," a French officer writes, who has been at the front since the beginning of the war, "have faith in a mysterious power analogous to the antique fatality which disposes our lot."

"Those that it favors we say are 'in luck.' The greatest imprudence does not affect their invulnerability. Others seem fated to sacrifice. If they escape from a pitched battle a spent ball or a fragment of shell will get them the following day, miles behind the trenches, while they are in apparent security."

"This instinctive belief brings a certain tranquility not only to those who think that they are 'in luck,' but to those also who are in doubt whether they possess a lucky star. 'No one escapes his fate,' they say. 'If one is slated for death, what's the good of taking precautions? The bullet that's intended for me will find me.'"

"Certain cases seem to bear out this superstition. One of them is told by an officer of the general staff, tall, cool, almost as phlegmatic as an Englishman and so careful to exaggerate nothing that he seems to contemplate the most tragic events with the wrong end of his spysglass.

Sought Death in Vain.

"I ought to have been killed a hundred times," he told me. "At the moment of the general mobilization I was in the staff of the general of division, to whom I was personally attached after years of very close collaboration. He treated me somewhat as his personal aide-de-camp. I went everywhere with him."

"A few days after the declaration of war he was informed of the death of his wife, whom I knew he adored. He concealed his pain, but I understood at once that the blow had morally crushed him and that he had made up his mind to get himself killed."

"He daily rushed where the bullets were thickest. Beside the storms of shrapnel that burst above our heads the German bombardment of today is a small incident. Every other day he went to the first line, and, while the men lying around fired at the Germans, he remained erect to encourage them."

"One afternoon we passed four hours under the enemy's shells. From time to time I said to myself, 'In ten minutes or even in five minutes perhaps it will be my turn.' But we were neither of us touched."

"Another day, after a very violent engagement, in which we had been obliged to give way, one of our batteries remained stuck between the two armies. I proposed to reconnoiter the position to see if it was possible to bring it back. I intended to go alone and to come back quickly. But the general declared he would go along. It was vain to remark that it was not his place."

Walked Amid Bullets.

"Everything went well, and we reached the position of the battery without any trouble. There remained only two men, a major and a private soldier, guarding the battery, firing with all their energy to make the enemy believe that the position was still occupied in force. We succeeded in getting the pieces into shape and dragging them out of danger, but instead of following the direct route toward our lines the general proposed that we make a little detour. 'In order,' he said, 'that the men may not have the impression that we are retreating.'"

"We followed a route on the side of a hill which during several hundred yards passed over a space of absolutely uncovered ground between the two firing lines. If I had been alone I should have covered that space at double quick. The general, though, declared that this precipitation would have produced a bad effect upon the troops, so it was at a walk that we crossed this exposed ground, offering ourselves as targets to the German infantry."

"The balls whistled around us incessantly, so thickly that the leaves on the trees along the route fell as in an autumn storm. Neither of us received a scratch; neither were our horses touched. I asked the general if he did not think it marvelous that we should have passed unscathed through this storm of bullets. He shook his head sadly and said, 'The bullets don't seem to want me.' As for me, since that trial there is nothing that surprises me. I sincerely believe I'm 'in luck,' and am quite sure that the Germans will never get me."

"Suwanee River" War March.

"Way Down Upon the Suwanee River" is now sharing with "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" in the affections of the British soldiers. The men of Kitchener's new armies sing it daily in their long practice marches. It is also being played all the way across England by the band of one brigade of 10,000 recruits who are marching from Whitby to Salisbury plain.

Some Difference.

Floyd and Walter had just come home from school. Walter, the younger, said to Floyd: "We got two dead birds in our room." Floyd replied: "That ain't nothing, we have lots of them. They ain't dead, them's stuffed."

CAN YOU CONCEIVE WHAT 17,000,000 MEANS?

Russia has 8,000,000 men in the field; Germany, 5,000,000; France, 3,000,000, and Great Britain, 1,000,000; total, 17,000,000.

The soldiers are counted every day, but if one man had to count them the task would take him about 280 days, working day and night and taking no meal times.

If the whole of the troops could be crowded close together, like strap hangers in a New York subway train, they would cover 1,170 acres of ground.

Could the men be stood each upon another's head they would make a column 17,615 miles high.

Standing shoulder to shoulder they would require a trench that would reach from New York to San Francisco and back again.

If each man wrote only a single word the result would provide a newspaper with ten pages of solid matter every day for six months.

If the fastest stenographer had to take down the names he would be 177 days getting his notes and nearly three years translating them.

RUSSIAN GIRL POSES AS CZAR'S DAUGHTER.

Pays "Royal" Visit to Hospital to Avenge General's Compliment.

That the Russian peasant girl does not lack a sense of humor has been shown by Yelina Romanoff, sixteen-year-old daughter of a poor fur dealer in Petrograd. Because she thought he had made fun of her she has made an army general the laughing stock of the capital.

While buying fruit from her at her father's stall the general quizzed the girl and told her she bore so striking a resemblance to one of the czar's daughters she might easily pass for the grand duchess. The girl took him at his word.

Aided by a couple of friends, she dressed as a Sister of Mercy and notified the station master at Tsarskoe Selo by telephone that the grand duchess was going to Gatchina, where the general was stationed. Yelina refused the offer of a special train and enchanted the railroad officials by her simple democratic bearing.

On arriving at Gatchina she would not let the general vacate his apartment for her, but chose his company. She declined the state carriage and rode to the hospital in an ordinary droschky, surrounded by funkies and officials and accompanied by the general.

A ceremonial reception was extended to Yelina at the military hospital, where she inspected the wards and conversed with the wounded, who felt greatly honored.

But just as she was asking about the money collected for the grand duchess' fund up came Count Mordvinoff, the emperor's attaché, who discovered the imposture. Instead of being embarrassed Yelina greeted the exposure with peals of laughter.

The girl was returned to Petrograd in a third class car and there examined at length by the police. Afterward she was turned over to her father.

Lightning's Curious Freak Sings Hens and Puzzles Farmer.

On entering one of his henhouses the morning after a storm, B. E. Moore, at the Oaks, Highland Lake, Conn., was puzzled by finding three fried eggs in a nest.

Looking at his White Leghorns he discovered that the tails and wings of most of them were singed. Further investigation revealed that a bolt of lightning had entered the house. There were forty hens in the building and none was killed.

YALE MAN STIRS CLERGY.

Advocates Fewer Churches and More Ball Games and Dances.

In an address at New Haven urging a survey to weed out struggling churches, Professor William B. Bailey of Yale startled the clergy by declaring Connecticut overchurched. Many houses of worship, he said, were started out of spite.

He advocated fewer sectarian churches and more ball teams and places where dances and plays could be given.

HIRE'S LEPERS AS SERVANTS.

Doctor Declares Biblical Disease Neither Dangerous Nor Contagious.

"Leprosy is curable, and there is little danger of contracting the disease. I have shown this by having none but leprosy servants in my house for years and curing them all."

This statement was made at San Francisco by Dr. Adolph H. Bochner, for five years surgeon general of Spain and private physician to the late King Chulalongkorn.

Dog Rescues Foundling Baby.

Guided by the whining of Lottie, his Scotch terrier, Paul Haberman followed the dog into a hallway at 102 Hester street, New York city, and was led to what looked like a bundle of rags under the stairs. Lottie scratched at the bundle and refused to leave it. Haberman then found that it contained a pretty ten-days-old girl.

Now form tucks above hem, crossing on crosslines of single small "O" perforations; stitch lower tuck 4 inches, center tuck 3 inches and upper tuck 2 inches from folded edges. Press upper edge of skirt, bringing slot perforation near center-back to center, and bring remaining slot perforations to corresponding small "O" perforations and tack. New York, April 24.—The question of the sanity of Harry K. Thaw will be determined by a jury.

Supreme Court Justice Hendrick, in a decision handed down in New York, granted the application for a trial made by Thaw's attorneys on a writ of habeas corpus.

Justice Hendrick set the date of the sanity trial for May 17.

This trial will be with a view of aiding the court in deciding later as to whether the prisoner should be set at large or should be taken from the Tombs back to the State Asylum for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan, from which he once escaped.

Thaw's lawyers declared, however, that the decision of the court assured Thaw his freedom, and they expressed no doubt of the jury's decision.

Thaw was in court when Justice Hendrick announced his opinion. His face at once lighted up with pleasure. His attorneys, friends and others in the court room rushed to congratulate him, and he was kept busy for nearly half an hour shaking hands before he was taken back to the Tombs.

"It will be good news to my mother," he told the newspaper men; "that's all I care to say for publication."

The moot question which Justice Hendrick had to decide was whether the court had power to grant a jury trial. He held, after a study of the authorities, that he did have such power and has decided to exercise it. He pointed out in the decision that the jury was called in "to aid the court by their advice," and that the finding of the jury would not be binding if the court was satisfied that it was not in accordance with the evidence and with justice. The court, he said, could disregard the jury's verdict and render his own decision.

As Thaw left the court room to return to the Tombs he was compelled to shake hands with more than 200 persons who crowded about to congratulate him. Thaw's return to the Tombs was in marked contrast with former journeys to that prison. He was cheered by hundreds who had heard the news that he was to be given a chance for freedom. Even the newsboys on Center street shouted their congratulations as Thaw walked toward the prison.

FARMER'S CONFESS MURDER

Admit Killing Man and Housekeeper to Commit Robbery.

Medina, N. Y., April 24.—Charles Stellow and Nelson Green, two farmers living directly across the country road from a rich neighbor farmer near Medina, named Charles Phelps, confessed that they had murdered Phelps and his housekeeper, Margaret Wolcott, during the night of March 21. Robbery was the motive.

Phelps was found dying in the kitchen on the morning of March 22, with two bullets in his body. His housekeeper was found dead on the doorsteps of Stellow's house, directly across the road.

Stellow claimed to have found her boy there when he came out to do his chores in the morning. He also found Phelps still alive, but unconscious. Phelps died that noon without regaining his senses. Stellow gave an alarm.

ROBBED OF ANTIQUES

Wagons Used to Carry Away Loot at Phoenixville.

Phoenixville, Pa., April 24.—"The Knoll," the palatial home of Mrs. Paul S. Reeves, on the outskirts of this city, was entered and robbed within the week, according to information which came to light.

Valuable antiques, rugs and furniture, which had been collected by the late Paul S. Reeves, were carried off by a band of men who had evidently used several wagons to make away with their loot.

Mrs. Reeves, who had not occupied the house during the winter, discovered the theft on her return a few days ago. Police and private detectives are investigating.

Butcher Freed by Bull.

Quakertown, Pa., April 24.—A large bull being driven to slaughter by Arthur Bodder, a Richlandtown butcher, became suddenly infuriated, ran for a mile and was only brought down by a shotgun after knocking Bodder to the ground and who, by a superhuman effort, gained his feet and sought refuge on a tree where nearby residents came to his rescue by killing the enraged animal.

Dollar a Mile as Fine.

Wilmington, Del., April 24.—When Harry Ingram, a taxicab chauffeur, was arraigned in the city court for speeding, Judge Churchman declared that a fine of $1 would be imposed for each mile that the driver exceeds the speed limit. Ingram was fined $20 and costs.

AUTHORITIES KILL 1000 PIGS

May be Necessary to Destroy Thousands More.

Philadelphia, April 24.—Veterinarians of the state and federal governments toiled in the South Philadelphia piggeries fighting to prevent a spread of the hoof and mouth disease which made its appearance there several days ago.

Before nightfall put a stop to the work approximately a thousand hogs had been carried off to the abattoirs to be slaughtered.

It was an unpleasant job, for the veterinarians were forced to work among the filthiest conditions, such as are habitually found among pig pens, and they saw on infected animals some of the worst lesions they had ever witnessed.

They had the satisfaction, however, when they stopped their day's work of realizing that they had done much toward checking the spread of the disease, and they were further cheered by the reports of investigators, who learned of nothing to indicate that the disease had gone beyond the confines of the piggeries in the neighborhood of Thirty-first street and Maiden Lane.

Mayor of Terre Haute Declares He Will Not Resign.

He sent telegrams to Terre Haute regarding the appointment of policemen. It is said that he has ordered the force to be cut down, and that he will forward by letter a plan to reduce city expenses. Roberts says that he will not resign as mayor.

Two German Airships Said to Be Flying Over England.

London, April 24.—A daylight raid of English coast towns by Zeppelin airships is reported in a dispatch from Blythe. This states that two Zeppelins are flying over the Northumberland coast.

(Blythe is a port in Northumberland, the most northern county in England, on the North sea, at the mouth of the Blythe river. The town is about 215 miles from London as the crow flies.)

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS

Clean Up and Paint Up—Get Behind the Brush

SPRINGTIME has at last come to stay, to prepare all nature for summer's flowers and the autumn's harvest.

Even the abject stir about their wretched premises, plant morning glories and try their best to fix up the leaning pickets left from the kindling needs of the later frosty mornings. Good housewives tie towels about their heads, and their narrow skirts and chase the dust of winter from their rooms. The laziest pick and trifle with their belongings to fix themselves better to face the changing seasons.

"Clean up!" is the phrase. Why not enlarge it? Why not "paint up?"

And if "paint up," why not do it so it will LAST and PAY?

Painting is another "art preservative." Rightly done, it saves repair, adds to length of property-life, increases property-attractiveness, brings to the tenant's lips the pleased smile, to the righteous landlord the wholesome feeling of duty well performed.

Between ourselves, there's room for lots on lots of paint here in Ourtown. Well applied, in colors judiciously selected, it would conceal a multitude of architectural and sanitary sins from the discerning eyes of tourists passing this way and from ourselves.

Look over your OWN house, or home, or business structure.

Don't YOU agree? Try our prescription—"Clean Up and Paint Up."

SEVERAL VEGETABLE RECIPES.

Celery a la Creme.

WASH and trim two heads of celery, removing the outside stringy stalks. Place the celery in a pan of cold water and bring to the boiling point. Boil for five minutes, then drain and add to the celery enough milk and water to cover. Simmer gently until the celery is tender, adding also one small onion sliced and some sprigs of parsley, marjoram and thyme. Dish the celery and thicken the milk with the flour; add one ounce of butter, some salt and pepper and pour over the celery. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve very hot.

Scalloped Onions.

Boil three large onions until just tender, drain them and slice them thinly in rings. Butter thickly some scallop shells and sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Place a layer of sliced onion in the shells, sprinkle with crumbs, and so on until the shells are well piled up, the last layer to be breadcrumbs. On these place some pieces of butter. Put into the oven for about twenty minutes until nicely browned on top. Serve hot in the shells.

Cut two carrots into small strips and a turnip into small cubes. Boil these together for fifteen to twenty minutes in salted water. Drain and stir them into a half pint of white sauce. Dish in a hot tureen and sprinkle with a little chopped parsley.

Browned Turnips.

Peel and cut a half dozen small turnips into squares and boil these in some salted water until tender without being broken at all. Heat one ounce of butter and when quite hot add a half teaspoonful of sugar. Fry the turnips until nicely browned. Sprinkle with pepper and salt and serve them in a hot tureen with roast mutton.

Parsnip Croquettes.

Mash three boiled parsnips when they are parboiled by passing them through a sieve. Season with salt and pepper, add one tablespoonful of flour and an egg. Form into flat cakes and coat with egg and crumbs. Fry in deep fat and drain. Garnish with parsley.

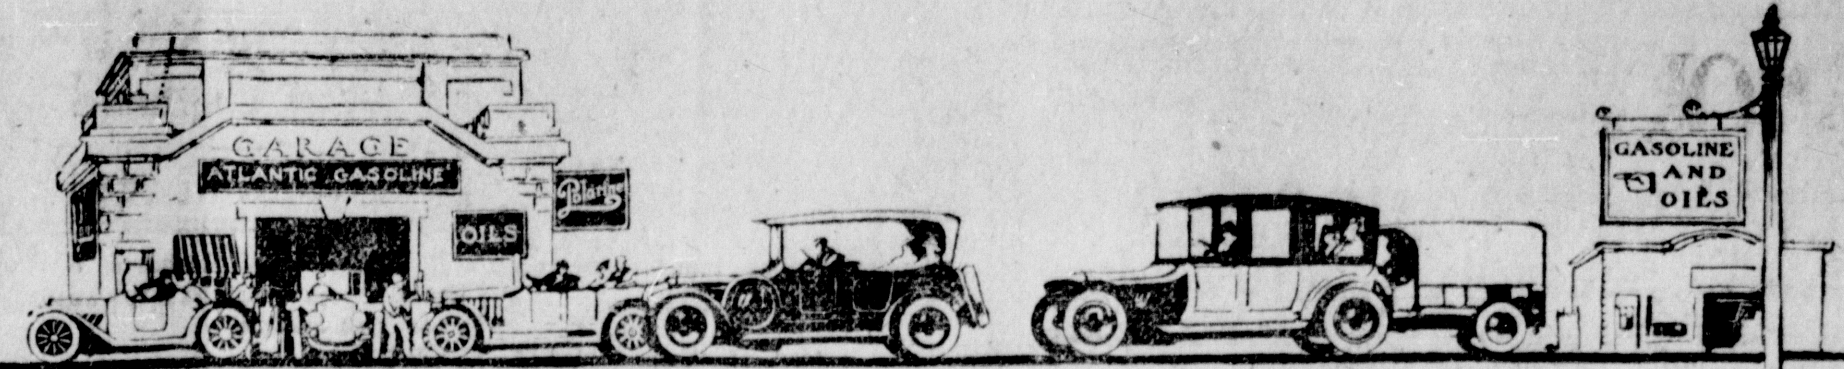

Potato Chips.

Peel and cut a half dozen potatoes into chips and place them in cold water. Heat some fat until smoking. Dry the chips and place them in the frying basket. Lower them gently and slowly into the fat and fry until the fat is chilled. Remove the basket and reheat the fat, then lower the chips a second time and fry until a golden brown and nicely crisped.

How an Aeronaut Was Captured

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Lieutenant Ben Harbeson of the United States aeroplane corps was called to the telephone.

"Well?"

"Mr. Harbeson?"

"Yes, I'm Harbeson."

"I'm Colonel Carrington. I've called you up to say that Jack is anxious to go up with you for a fight."

"What Jack?"

"My Jack."

The colonel was laboring under a delusion that Harbeson had been at his quarters and was familiar with his family. The truth was that the lieutenant had never been at headquarters long enough to make their acquaintance. There was a pause in the dialogue. Carrington expecting that his subordinate would offer to take Jack up with him, the lieutenant shrinking from the responsibility. Of course, the former had no authority to command the latter to do such a thing; he must volunteer.

"How old is Jack?" asked Harbeson.

"Eighteen."

"Nervy?"

"Very."

"Well, I'm going up this afternoon for a short trip. I don't mind taking a passenger."

"Thank you. What time?"

"Three o'clock."

There were two goodbyes and two receivers were hung up. Harbeson went away muttering to himself. He disliked to take any one up with him that he did not know and as to whose nerve he was ignorant. Indeed, he would have positively refused the request had it not been made by his commanding officer. As it was he could not very well refuse. He only hoped the boy would not get frightened or dizzy and bring about an accident.

Shortly before 3 o'clock Harbeson superintended the rolling of his machine from the sheds on to the level ground from which he proposed to make his start and was examining its parts to see if everything was secure when he saw a girl open the gate and come tripping over the turf toward him. She came up with a smile and saluted Harbeson in a very friendly manner.

"It's awfully good of you to take me up with you, Mr. Harbeson," she said.

"Take you up with me?" replied the lieutenant wondering.

"Way, yes," rejoined the girl, some what taken aback at his asking the question and his manner. "Didn't papa arrange it with you?"

"Colonel Carrington telephoned me that his son Jack wished to go up."

"I'm Jack," rejoined the girl, laughing. "My name's Jacqueline. Everybody calls me Jack."

Here was a dilemma. If he took the girl up with him and she should become panic stricken she might cling to him like a drowning person and be the cause of the death of both of them. If he sent her away he might offend his commander. He stood irresolute for a moment, then gave in to the girl, who was dainty and pretty as a shepherdess on the mimic stage.

After a few more minutes of search for weak parts in his machine Harbeson mounted to his seat, the girl climbed to the empty one beside him, there was a humming and a whirling, and the machine lifted on an inclined plane. Miss Carrington from the first showed no more sign of appreciation of danger than if she had been sitting in an auto.

"Isn't it nice?" Harbeson was not yet an expert at driving an aeroplane and understood perfectly that any mismanagement on his part would cause a tragedy. He was not displeased that his companion was insensible to the danger so long as nothing unusual occurred. She chattered like a magpie, calling his attention to this and to that, just as though the sensation was as new to him as to her.

Presently there came a gust of wind that turned the aeroplane on its beam. Harbeson paled, while Jack caught her breath. But the moment the machine righted itself she clapped her hands delightedly, exclaiming:

"Wasn't that just too lovely for anything! Do it again."

Harbeson, whose heart was beating like a kettledrum, made no reply that could be heard, though he remarked to himself that if ever there was a fool it was the girl beside him. Nevertheless despite the shock he had received he almost smiled and could not help thinking that Jack was a very delightful fool.

The weather was a trifle gusty when they started, and in the upper air they found it more so. After having been nearly capsize Harbeson started to return. He was caught in another gust so severe that Miss Jack was this time suddenly made aware that she was likely to be spilled from a thousand feet up in the air.

Both her fair arms went around the lieutenant's neck.

Fortunately the machine righted itself. Miss Carrington suddenly became aware that she was embracing a man she had not seen an hour before. She released him and covered her face with her hands.

Harbeson is now a captain and one of the most experienced aero men in the United States service. He says that he never intended to marry and probably never would have married had he not been nearly strangled a thousand feet up in the air by a girl.

His wife's reply to the allegation is: "No such thing."
